DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

After years of flirting with cinema while pursuing other professional paths, I found in this project the opportunity to finally tell a story of my own. Malina is born from a personal experience: that of watching a carefully built life crumble.

Ana is a young mother whose son, Davi, is kidnapped under strange circumstances. Feeling guilty, she leans on her husband, Marcelo, and her best friend, Helena. But soon she discovers that perhaps neither of them deserves her trust, and that something sinister is at work to take away everything she has.

Although it is an allegory for a personal experience, the short film also addresses a feeling that is common nowadays: the difficulty of distinguishing truth from manipulation in an unstable and sometimes chaotic world.

Made independently, with limited resources, Malina is the result of an intense collective effort. More than just a genre exercise, this is a film about loss... be it physical or of trust.
